UK-based BPEC, provides education and lifelong learning to those who work in the Building Services Engineering (BSE) sector. It is a leader in skills development, providing services to colleges, private training centres, employers and learners across the plumbing, heating, gas, and wider energy sector.

BPEC's learning materials range from technical training packs for Domestic Gas Safety and Water Regulations to Renewable Technologies such as Solar Thermal Hot Water and Heat Pumps. BPEC is dedicated to promoting education and lifelong learning and seeks to encourage individuals to undertake further training to continuously update their skills, both for personal development and to keep abreast of industry's technological advances and regulatory requirements.

Gas is a trade that requires very professional training as it is a subject that can be extremely dangerous if not treated with respect.

Matt Skelding BPEC's Head of Operations and Development said "I'm absolutely delighted to welcome CMS training as a BPEC recognised centre, the first outside of the UK for BPEC. Whilst delivering our products internationally means there are limited financial gains for BPEC Certification, we are here to support industry and as a not-for-profit organisation we have the freedom to work without the constraints of shareholder demands. We value working with all our centres, and working with CMS is no different; who wouldn't value working with an organisation with a mission of creating a culture of excellence?"

Christina Aradiotis, Owner and Managing Director of CMS Training Centre commented, "For us, the major benefit of working with an international company such as BPEC lies within the help and support we receive. BPEC understands our needs and is always there for us with any of our training needs. Our standards are high and our mission; to support contractors working on the Sovereign Bases (SBAs) on the island as well as local businesses with the very best in training."
